Introduction

My area of interest in the Doctorate level. I recently had the opportunity to learn about the program of application for department Business Administration (Economics and Finance) as a Asst. Professor and DSF. My intellectual curiosity about life and passion for asking questions is what led me to pursue my Ph.D. in Economics and Management Science; however, my interest in a business career is also long standing.

My passion for teaching has provided me with a unique skill set which I believe will be critical for a successful career in consulting. My communication skills strengthened as I challenged myself to understand and respond to the students' questions while they tackled complex Economical concepts. To convey the material clearly to students with diverse learning styles, I developed different approaches to explain a single concept. I also embraced and supported a team culture, utilizing student feedback to improve my own performance and encouraging students to engage each other in their learning.
